Problem with fisheye

Posted by Atreide - 2009/01/11 09:50

Fisheye is working correctly even in IE6...but as soon as I'm using a component with mootools this one stop to work (the mootool component).

I feel a JQuery vs Mootools conflict.

Probably the jQuery.noConflict() could solve the probleme but I was not able to place it. Especially because the js are packed.

May be this could be added to a next release.

So I ban any mootools modules from my template but I notice the fisheye menu also conflict with other jquery modules. I'm trying the superfish menu (jquery), when this one is running all the fisheye icons are place on the left (one over the other one) and are not moving anymore.

If I set the option to avoid loading jquery (because done by other modules) then the fisheye is not working (even not visible).

I also try to add another mod like the kwickverticalmenu from camp26 with fisheyemenu and unfortunately a conflict also appears.

My feeling is that 80% of the problem posted in the forum are

Mootools vs JQuery conflict

jQuery vs JQuery conflict (even between camp26 mod themselves)

Shame because these components look really nice...

The same here(kwickverticalmenu from camp26 with fisheyemenu). Does anybody find a solution? Is it worth to spend some hours to find a solution, or it is more complicated?
